Leading Individuals and Groups in the Age of AI: Theory Building and Research Publication Strategies

Programme Dates: 12th March-30th March, 2026

About the Course:

The purpose of this course is to provide an understanding on how the rapid integration of Artificial Intelligence (AI) into organizations is transforming individual behavior, interpersonal relationships, and group dynamics at work. As AI reshapes decision-making, communication, performance evaluation, and collaboration, managers must develop heightened self-awareness, emotional intelligence, and group leadership capabilities to navigate emerging psychological, ethical, and social challenges. It is designed to provide insights to participants on managing self and teams for effectively handling the challenges and opportunities created in the AI landscape. Participants will also get exposure to managing issues pertinent to motivation, power dynamics, performance management, and employee experiences. Through a combination of theoretical frameworks from organizational behavior, social psychology, and leadership studies, real-world cases, simulations, and reflective exercises, course equips learners with practical tools to manage themselves and lead groups effectively in data-driven, technology-intensive settings.

In addition, the course offers structured exposure to academic research publishing. Participants are introduced to the research-to-publication pipeline, including identifying publishable research questions, engaging with contemporary journal literature, understanding peer-review processes, and translating empirical and conceptual insights into conference papers, book chapters, and journal submissions. Guided discussions on research design, positioning contributions, and responding to reviewer feedback help participants build confidence in scholarly writing and dissemination.
