12 Days INTERDISCIPLINARY Refresher Course on Reclaiming Indian Intellectual Traditions in Social Sciences and Humanities

(Online Mode)

March 09 – 21, 2026

About the Course:

Since the introduction of Western education by the colonial administration, the traditions of acquiring knowledge—as well as the methods of inquiry and the purposes of education—underwent a profound transformation in India. Colonial policies, with their emphasis on modern disciplines and subsequent domination of Eurocentric approaches in knowledge systems, systematically marginalized indigenous intellectual traditions and distorted the foundational aims of knowledge creation and dissemination. The education in post-Independent India not only retained but also encouraged adoption of those 'modern' epistemological methods and continued structuring of disciplines in Indian universities. The National Education Policy 2020 (NEP) marks a critical shift. It encourages incorporation of inclusive, holistic, and multidisciplinary approaches and embraces epistemic plurality. It aims to rebuild knowledge systems and, thereby, reform the very structure of contemporary education systems. It directs us to develop frameworks that are rooted in India's cultural ethos, intellectual traditions, and civilizational heritage. While NEP might be reinvigorating interest in India's civilizational and knowledge traditions, there remains a significant gap in recognizing and reclaiming contributions of intellectuals, thinkers, and scholars of the late 19th to mid-20th century India who laid critical foundations for developing social sciences that attended to socio-cultural and political economic realities in India. Here's a brief overview of what this course includes:

Objectives

- To reintroduce participants with the scholars and intellectual traditions that developed in the late-19th till mid-20th century Bharat;
- To encourage participants to reintroduce scholars and thinkers like Benoy Kumar Sarkar, D.R. Gadgil, J.C. Kumarappa, Irawati Karve, M.N. Srinivas, A.K. Saran, Dharma Kumar, C.N. Vakil, P.R. Brahmananda, Radhakumud Mukerjee, A.K. Dasgupta, D.P. Mukherjee, Ardeshir Darabshaw Shroff, B.R. Ambedkar, Dharampal, R.C. Mazumdar, H.C. Roychaudhuri, Sri Sitaram Goel, Ananda Coomaraswamy, Jadunath Sarkar, among others in curriculum, pedagogy and also produce academic works engaging with them;
- To reclaim those methodologies and ideas in research and classroom teaching for fostering intellectual decolonization;
- To build a network of scholars who consistently engage and advance teaching and research rooted in intellectual traditions of India.

Participants Eligibility Criteria
